GENDER COORDINATION REPORT 2011

I. INTRODUCTION

1. 2011 marked the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the Triangle factory fire, which occurred in New York on 25 March 1911 and claimed the lives of 146 women garment workers. The women were trapped in the factory because the owners had locked the doors from the outside. While this event took place one hundred years ago, thousands of migrant women workers continue to experience very difficult and unsafe working conditions throughout the world. Contributing to making migration safe for women therefore remains a central objective of IOM through the work of the Gender Coordination Unit.

2. In 2011, the Unit contributed to discussions at the Fifty-fifth Session of the Commission on the Status of Women on “Access and participation of women and girls in education, training and science and technology, including for the promotion of women’s equal access to full employment and decent work” by improving the knowledge base on skilled migrant women’s access to decent jobs or their lack thereof.

3. Throughout the year, the Unit specifically worked in the following thematic areas:
   • Violence and discrimination affecting migrant women and girls;
   • Gender, migration and development, including women’s labour migration, remittances and capacity-building for women in diaspora associations;
   • Female genital mutilation in the context of migration;
   • Prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse.

II. AWARENESS-RAISING ACTIVITIES ON GENDER AND MIGRATION

Information sheets on key gender and migration-related issues

4. The Gender Coordination Unit continued with the preparation of information sheets in order to make key information more accessible to IOM staff, policymakers and practitioners. It has prepared an information sheet on gender, migration and social remittances, which will be released before the end of the year. Other information sheets on gender and labour migration, integration and migrant employment are being developed.

Capacity Building Workshop for Women Leaders of Diaspora Associations

5. For the second year in a row, the Unit co-organized this capacity-building workshop to strengthen the capacity of migrant women based in the North to guide diaspora organizations and mobilize diaspora contributions and human and financial capital for the development of countries and communities of origin. The training took place in Haifa, Israel, from 15 to 24 November 2010 and brought together 21 participants. Through these two workshops, the Unit has trained 50 diaspora women. In 2011, in collaboration with the IOM Office in the United Kingdom and in Germany, the Unit organized follow-up meetings in London and Berlin for 2009 and 2010 participants to meet, network, build on the workshop and strategize for joint efforts in their countries of origin and destination.
Addressing female genital mutilation in the context of migration

6. To mark the International Day of Zero Tolerance for Female Genital Mutilation, the Unit co-organized a press conference at the Palais des Nations in Geneva. The IOM Director General took this opportunity to raise awareness about the impact of migration on the practice and related challenges facing the international community. The Unit also participated in a panel on building bridges to achieve zero tolerance for female genital mutilation, organized by the Inter-African Committee on Traditional Practices.

Deskilling of qualified migrant women

7. As a contribution to the discussions of the Fifty-fifth Session of the Commission on the Status of Women, and in order to contribute to a better understanding of how women are affected by brain waste and professional deskilling linked with migration, the Unit worked on the book entitled Crushed hopes: Underemployment and Deskilling among Skilled Migrant Women (to be published in early 2012) and also participated in a side event during the session which was held on 25 February 2011. On the occasion of International Women’s Day, the Unit was involved in the drafting of a press release and a panel discussion on “When education does not lead to decent work and full employment: the plight of underemployed and deskilled migrant women”, held in Geneva. Furthermore, the Unit participated in a ministerial roundtable breakfast on “Mobility of skilled migrants and the problem of de-skilling of migrants”, held as a side event during the United Nations Economic and Social Council high-level segment that took place in Geneva. The Unit also worked on a one-day creative workshop in Geneva with deskilled migrant women to provide them with tools to overcome the psychosocial toll caused by their professional situation.

Protecting women migrant domestic workers

9. During the Conference, the IOM Director General participated in the high-level interactive thematic debates as lead discussant on the theme of “Human and social development, gender equality and empowerment of women”; IOM co-hosted a special event chaired by the IOM Director General and the Under-Secretary-General of UN-Women, Ms. Michelle Bachelet, on “Integrating migration and remittances into LDC national and regional development planning, including through a gender perspective”; and IOM organized an exhibition including a roll-up panel display on migrant women and development.

The training brought together 24 participants from countries of origin and destination.
